I recently found out that google does take care of your domain name ..
If the domain name is not related to the keyword you are targeting google wont show the appropriate advertising "ctr lower " less clicks since users doesn't not find what they are looking for ...

Solution : Build a sub-domain with the keyword you are targeting and promote it .. it should work !

After researching quite a bit to understand Google AdSense and how to best implement and optimize AdSense contextual ads for several Web sites, I'm not at all surprised to see that a major key to generating revenue with AdSense contextual ads is the critical importance of interesting, keyword rich content and solid search engine optimization. Great content helps to draw visitors to your site, which in turn brings in the traffic to help your site generate revenue. Optimizing your site for AdSense helps AdSense serve appropriate contextual ads. SEO, SEM, of course, can help your site show up on the first page of search engine results. They all work together.

I was also struck by the tremendous volume of "how to get rich quick" schemes using Google AdSense. If you've done any 'Google AdSense' searches or other searches for how to monetize your website, you've already seen what I mean.
